JP Morgan Chase CEO Jamie Dimon has reportedly fired several staffers for wanting to work from home. The firm has also laid off employees who opposed the company's plan to require all hybrid workers to return to the office full-time by March.

The Wall Street firm has been struggling to bring workers back. The company has asked employees to return to their desks as early as last month, but its rivals are still pushing for a return to full-time by April 2023.

The firm's aggressive push to return to full-time work has exactly hurt its bottom line. JP Morgan recently reported a decline in its fourth-quarter revenue, with a loss of $1.5 billion.

Nevertheless in a recent post, Dimon said that the firm's employees was an attempt to return to full-time. The latest move to scrap hybrid work is a sign of the firm's desperation.

Dimon, who has long been a proponent of remote work, for remote work, doubled down on his strategy. He now exclusively made his case for remote work, making it clear there is no room for hybrid work.

A lot of you were on the fence and you were doing okay? You know, looking at sending texts to each other an asshole the other way Not paying attention to the stuff, you know? And that that slows down efficiency creates rudeness, it creates

And when I found out you doing that — you do that goddamn meetings. I mean meeting with me, you know you got my focus, I mean goddamn phone, I mean to people, okay? It slows work. And it doesn't hurt creativity. It slows down making. And don't get me work from home Friday lot of people on Friday goddamn person to get

The young generation is by this. That may or may particular staff, but that's behind. They're being socially, ideas, meetings fact, my guess is more communities a hell of a lot than this room. Even if looking to be 10 percent If I was running a department people, I guarantee you could run it with 90 percent efficient. I guarantee you in my sleep. And that's bureaucracies, "I need can't get it done." Not filling out requests that done. Your people are meetings they don't

I can't stand it anymore a choice. You don't have Morgan. So the people don't want to work and that's fine with me. I mean Don't be mad at me.
You can walk on your company is going to standards and do it I've had it with this

I come in, you know seven days a goddam Covid. And I come in where's everybody e here and there and th Zooms don't show u they didn't get stuff.
you run a great comp

We didn't build this doing that, by doing disease shit that ever
